

Arguing For Change

For our first argumentative essay, find something that you would like to see changed in the world and write a letter or email to someone/something who/that can actually do something about the problem. The recipient of this letter could be a politician, company, news organization, or anyone else who can do something.

Your argument can be about anything, ranging from global issues to politics to speed limits, but it should showcase all of our argumentative skills, have a thoughtful and respectful tone, and be your best work. It need not be sent, though you will get three points of extra credit for actually sending it.
