

The Writing Process and You

“Good writing is essentially rewriting. I am positive of this.” — Roald Dahl

I would argue that for most high school students, the process of writing a paper is one that looks like this:

Time spent (by percentage) on the part of the process

But if one looks at the advice of writer after writer after writer, they advocate something that looks more like this:

Time spent (by percentage) on the part of the process

